Stuffed animals have educational value, especially for young children who are developing reading skills:

Stuffed animals make great reading companions & are an intrinsic link to the imagination for children. Children can imagine entire universes where their stuffed animals can talk, move, dance, & engage in adventures with them.

When serving as a "Reading Buddy" or "Book Buddy," stuffed animals can promote...

- a sense of safety & security to take risks
- the practicing of book-related vocabulary
- confidence building (toys don't judge)
- competency in retell specific events & details of a story

When a child has a stuffed animal that resembles or is actually made to represent a character in the story, it is called a "Book Buddy" & there is added magic! The child can more easily connect with the text. They can practice projecting emotions, reenact events, relate to characters, & recall story details more vividly.
